

CLAIMS

WHAT IS CLAIMED IS:

1. An attachment for a putter head capable of being attached thereto by any 2 suitable means; said attachment having an attachment location and at least one arcuate face or edge or further planar faces or edges defining at least one recess 4 therebetween; said recess being defined behind, in front of, or above the putter head in terms of the conventional striking direction; wherein at least one recess 6 is adapted to receive an object or article such as a conventional golf ball and restrict the movement thereof in a direction parallel to the striking face when the 8 said ball is in contact with the said faces or edges during the swinging of the putter by a user.
2. An attachment according to claim 1 wherein a plurality of recesses are defined 2 therein, each of which may be sized to receive a conventional golf ball.
3. An attachment according to claim 1 wherein said attachment is adapted to be 2 disposed behind the striking face of the putter head according to the direction in which a ball would be conventionally struck thereby during use.
4. An attachment according to claim 1 wherein the attachment is provided with at 2 least one arcuate hoop behind or in front of the attachment location, the edges or faces defining same having a separation which is marginally greater than that of 4 the diameter of the conventional golf ball.

5. An attachment according to claim 1 wherein the attachment is provided with a 2 pair of spaced limbs extending substantially parallel rearwardly or forwardly of the attachment location and generally perpendicular to the striking face of said 4 putter head, the separation of said limbs being marginally greater than the diameter of a conventional golf ball.

6. An attachment according to claim 1 wherein the means for attachment of said 2 attachment ensures uniform and repeatable attachment to the said putter head.